Oroville Dam Spillway Incident

- On 02/07/17 at 1000 hours, the Department of Water Resources (DWR) notified the California State Warning Center of an issue with the main spillway at Oroville Dam.
 - At this time, there is no concern with the Dam itself. There is no impact to the public.
 - After a series of tests on the main spillway with flows up to 20,000 cubic feet per second (cfs) overnight, the deterioration of the spillway that occurred was within the acceptable thresholds that were established by the field command (team of engineers from DWR and FERC).
 - The left and right wall of the spillway also sustained damage during the overnight release. The decision was made by DWR in consultation with regulators, to ramp up the spillway release to 35,000 cfs short term.
 - Field command will be monitoring the spillway 24 hours a day. Based on the hydrologic modeling and the current outflows, it is more likely that the emergency spillway will be engaged approximately Saturday.
 - DWR-DSOD Engineers are on site and assessing the incident and will provide an update as information is available

Staff is preparing to open an additional 21 gates (46 total) on the Sacramento Weir at 1900 today to maintain stages in the Sacramento River at I Street below about 30 feet. The Sacramento Weir has 48 gates in total. Sacramento Maintenance Yard is monitoring stages at the weir to ensure operational criteria are maintained.

6 Day Precipitation Forecast

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

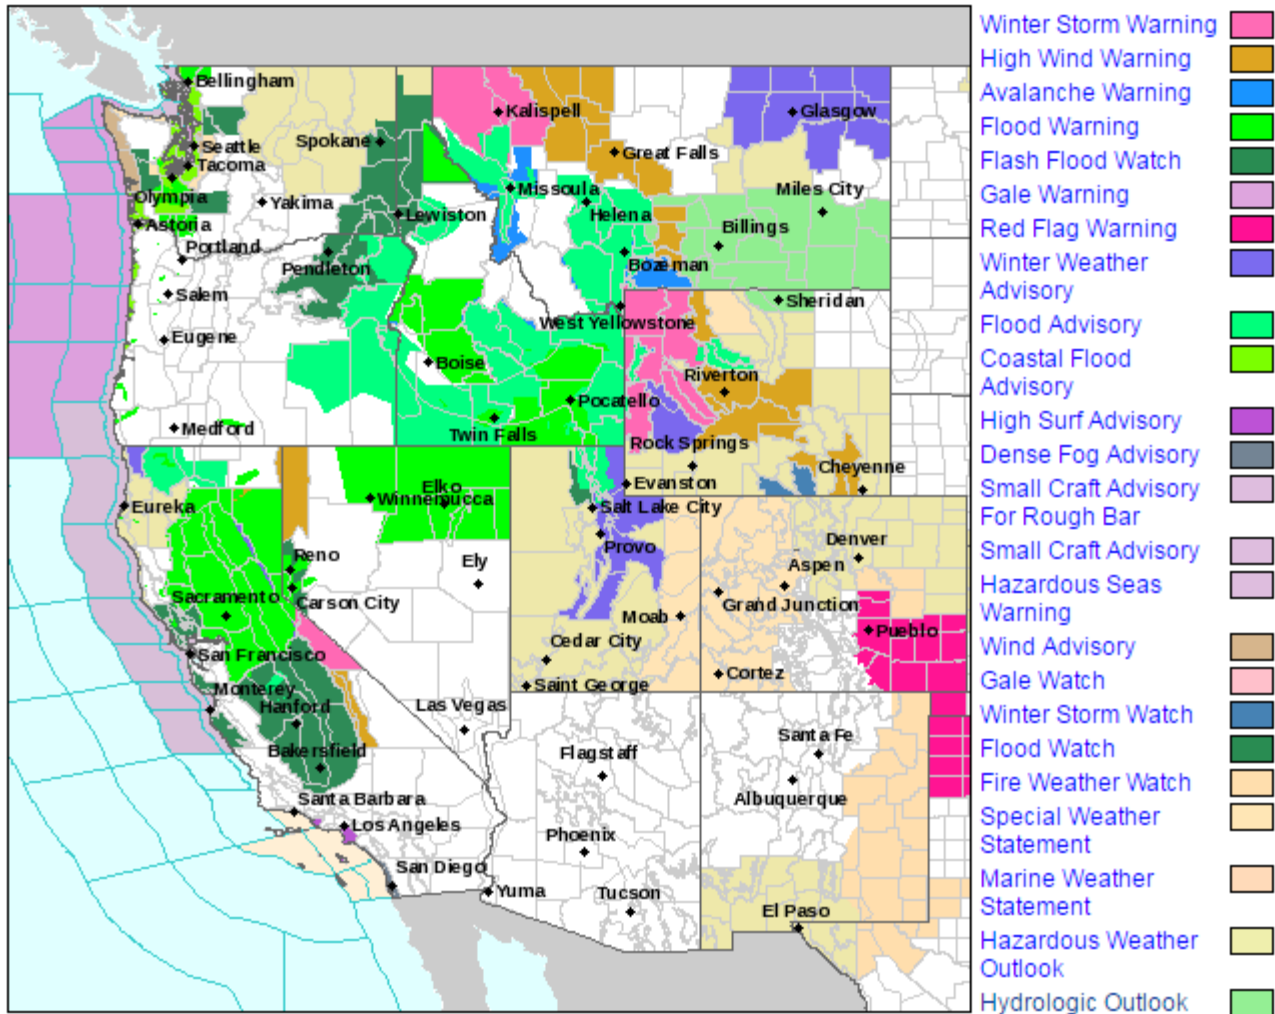

The storm system moving into Northern California today will continue to produce moderate to heavy precipitation with snow levels above 7000 feet. SE to SW winds will gust to 50-60 mph in many open areas and 80 mph or higher in the most wind-prone mountain locations. The main cold front associated with this storm is still offshore, but it will move through the region from west to east later today. Once the front passes winds will diminish and turn W-NW and snow levels will begin to drop as the steady precipitation turns to showers. Snow levels will gradually drop to 3000 feet in the north and 4500 feet in the south by midday Friday as widespread showers continue in the mountains and scattered showers continue in the valleys. Showers will come to an end prior to sunrise Saturday. High pressure will move overhead Saturday through Tuesday and produce warm and dry conditions with occasionally gusty N-E/offshore surface winds from the western Sierra slopes to the coast. On Wednesday the next approaching Pacific storm system will begin to spread clouds and increasing southerly winds over the region, and rain may move onshore overnight. That storm system is expected to impact the region through Friday, followed by another one a couple days later.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A Pacific trough dropping down the West Coast will bring a period of rain to Central California starting this afternoon and to Southern California starting Friday morning. After the cold front passes, scattered showers will continue across most of the area through Saturday afternoon. Most foothill and mountain locations across Central California will receive between 2 and 5 inches of rainfall, while the rest of the area away from the deserts will receive between 0.50 and 1.5 inches of rainfall. The snow level will initially start above 8,000 feet and then drop to between 5,000 and 6,000 feet by Saturday morning. South to west winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface across the wind prone mountain and desert areas this afternoon through Saturday morning. Temperatures will be 10 to 15 degrees above normal today, with upper 50s and 60s across the mountains and 70s to low 80s in the valleys. Temperatures will cool to near normal Friday and 5 to 10 degrees below normal Saturday. A ridge of high pressure will build into the West Coast bringing significant warming and drying to the region Sunday and Monday. Temperatures will be around 10 degrees above normal Monday through Wednesday. Minimum humidity will be mainly in the single digits and teens away from the San Joaquin Valley and coast Monday through the middle of next week. North to northeast winds of 20 to 40 mph with gusts to 60 mph will surface across the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California Saturday night through Monday morning.
